maximising NDIS plans

How will Inebura's Support Coordination help me?

Support Coordination is one of the most important funded supports that the NDIS offers participants. Inebura's Support Coordinators will enable you to live the life you choose by engaging the services in your NDIS plan. They will be the link between you and the assistance you receive, including informal, mainstream, community and funded supports. We're committed to helping you develop the skills you need to achieve your goals.

In a nutshell, Inebura's Support Coordinators will be your part personal shopper, part personal coach and part informal counsellor.

Am I eligible for Support Coordination Funding?

There are two main groups of people who receive funding for Support Coordination: participants who have complex needs and participants who are experiencing a major life transition. For those that don't receive funding for Support Coordination, Local Area Coordinators may help implement their plans, but don't usually offer ongoing support.

How does it work?

Setup

Your Support Coordinator will help you choose your goals, assist in deciding how best to achieve them, and connect you with the resources you need to do so.

Ongoing

Your Support Coordinator will help you decide how best to achieve the goals that are in line with your NDIS plan. They will also assist to connect you with services providers, help you understand their services agreements and to use the NDIS Portal. It may also involve them assisting you to build informal support networks which will help you become more independent.

Review

Towards the end of your plan, your Support Coordinator will help you prepare for your plan review. This is perhaps the most important element of Support Coordination as it will save you time spent on administration and will provide you with guidance throughout the review process allowing you to get the most out of your next plan.
